About This Game

Blind Boris is a survival horror about a blind person. The character arrives to the hospice and 2 weeks later strange things start to happen. Staff disappears, terrible sounds are heard outside, exit doors are tightly locked but aggressive visitors enter the building.

Mechanics:

- The player sees what Boris knows, relying on smell, hearing and memory.
- Resources are limited, and they can be found by smell or specific sounds.
- The opponents are walking around the house, but the player does not know exactly where they are. Attacks are always sudden.
 - Boris can defend himself, minimizing the damage.
 - The game has a system for creating items from four resources.
- A player can make and use traps. Some will show the enemy for a short time, and some will stun him.
 - When the enemy is trapped, he can be attacked directly.
- The main goal of the player is to get out of the house by opening five doors, so player have to explore hospice.
- Boris' memory is not stable and over time he will forget the architecture of the house, which will lead to the changes in locations.
 - Boris takes meds to stabilize memory. Meds save the game.

The game shares the universe with the Line, however playing the Line is not necessary to understand the plot of Blind Boris.

69 minutes in total is why I give this game a 6/9.

Great with friends, just like sex.. PROS: Panda Exo Pack is great. As a knifer, my reflexes have never been more on point, my enemies freak out when then see this asian bear with a knife sneaking up on them. I love the boosted stats it provide, furthermore I look like a Panda. This pack unlocked a new perk for me, Kung Fu mastery...I've never been able to jump this high and dash this fast. Panda is love, Panda is life.

CONS: This package will give pandas a huge advantage making the game now P2W(Pay to win) :V

Conclusion:

Two words = Panda Ground Slams. Wow. I wasn't expecting this.

What a gorgeous game.

I really want to share in detail why I enjoyed this game so much but it would be spoiling its magical atmosphere.

Think Skyrim without fights. Think Myst but cozy and cute. Think The Witness but with an inventory and quests.

This game has so much character and has such a beautiful and coherent background that I truly believe it is one of the most artistic games of 2019. I will keep fond memories of the lands of Eastshade for a very, very long time.. Once I started this game I was like, oh dear, not one of those again. It has a bit odd navigation but once used to that it plays actually very good. The puzzles are nice and you dont have to walk too much (if you use the map feature that is).

It's nicely drawn, not too good but certainly not bad. The plot is kinda ok but I disliked the voice acting a little, they all sounded a bit on... well ehm.. drugs to me. Still this game has a decent amount of scenes and puzzles and I would recommend this game as such.... The options to play the game don't work.. Don't waste your money. I have previously withheld my recomendation for this game based on the price and flaws. After playing extensively I and enjoying it I feel an update is required. The biggest factor for me is the price. The full game at almost £70 is a joke but this is C:NI somewhat cheaper and I got it on sale.

The missions for NI are great, they are well scripted and require thought and planning to succeed. For this alone the pice I paid was worth it. Replayability is limited because of the games lack of AI. The missions attempt to funnel you into specific directions where the limited AI be set up. Going around often turns a finley balanced situation into an easy win. The problem is once you have played a mission you know what the designer expects you to do.

The fiddlyness of the controls is something you get used to and the poor resolution of the map at close in zooms is ugly but not a deal breaker. The poor AI on both sides is something that is greatly mittigated by manually controlling every asset. This however leads to the absolute worst fault the game has to offer. Manually controlling a large fleet with a huge air wing is a grind but if you dont the following will happen;

-Aircraft will decide to return to bace or refule in air when extreamly close to intercepting dangerouse incomming enemy despite the refueling aircraft being extreamly far away.

-Aircraft will follow enemy back to thire airfield and promptly get shot down by SAM, if you set them to stick to a patrol area they will ignore enemy that are very close just outside of the patrol area.

-Aircraft will run out of fuel as the AI cant always figure out when to return to a home ship that has changed course or speed.

-Support aircraft dont attempt to run from incomming enemy.

Despite this and many more issues I do like this game and want to love it. I can recomend NI especial on sale but the devs have got alot to do before I or anyone elce should think about the full game. It is essential that certain design decisions be reverced to make this more moddable. Cos if the devs can't/won't fix a thing the community might.. This game doesn't let you change settings in-game, has no mouse sensitivity option, and the worst voice acting I've yet to hear.

Although this game cost less than CDN $2 I'm refunding what MUST be some sort of ♥♥♥♥♥♥ parody game because I want a coffee.

Lacklustre and uninspired exploration game in the vein of Dear Esther or The Old City Leviathan. No sense of mystery nor any David-Lynch-like intrigue.

The art style and graphics are overall interesting.. Buy this only after you have completed everything (+100h of gameplay) in the main game and want to start grinding for no reason proper.. Terrible graphics, I couldn't get them to work at all. Got stuck on just a black screen.. bought this game drunk should have stayed sober. I downloaded this along with Chicken invaders 5. There is no executable for this game. Did I waste another $2.99. Thanks for nothing.. Originally played the free version on phone but I bought it here so I can support the developers of this great game

Zarya-1 is a different take on horror\thriller game than these run & hide games.

You're not taking control over some random speechless person, you take over 4 people with different personalities and pasts indirectly, sitting in front of a computer and listening (reading, in this case) to your crew talking to you. You cannot see what your crew sees, so you have to depend on their describing of certain locations. Sometimes you will receive camera pictures of one of your crewmates, but other than that. You see nothing.

It's like telltale games except all you can do is depend on your choices and your crew drastically, because it will have an extreme value in life of death.

The game is set place on moon, where nobody will hear your plead for help, the place where nobody will come to help you.

Later on its set on the Research Site Zarya-1 (Dawn-One), an old 1988 Soviet Site sending an unknown signal to earth which you have to investigate the unexpected.

Even if its not "view-through-the-heroes-eyes" game, you will still feel thrilled upon your discoveries. Perhaps imagining them if they really happened, or what happened to those who you encounter. But I can't tell you for sure, you will have to see it for yourself. It's worth it.

If you have failed and resulted in your crew's death , try again!

Since you'd understand what you did wrong, doing something else will bring completely new results! The game is almost fully explorable even if youre not behind the astronaut's eyes.

The soundtrack really does match the theme and feelings you will feel upon discoveries or certain events, or even ambience.

So, i'd totally recommend this game to you if you like storytelling soviet-related thriller stories.. Its a great game although not scary for me but its definitely a great game to buy.
